The story follows a 14-year-old Jewish boy named Paul, who is caught wearing the Yarmulke by the Nazi SS in a Polish concentration camp. The film was released in the UK on 26 September 2008. It was given a 15 rating (for strong scenes of realistic violence and threat and adult material) by the British Board of Film Classification and was rated 16 (for strong scenes of realistic violence and threat) by the Motion Picture Association of America. It also became the first British film to receive a Parents' Choice Silver Award. The film has been the subject of controversy and criticism since its release. The distributor was taken to court by the Office for Film and Literature Classification (the BBFC). The distributor submitted a defence arguing that, despite being based on a novel by a Jewish author, the film could be interpreted as antisemitic, given that the main character is Jewish, and that the Nazi are the villains. The distributor was subsequently forced to pay £1000 in court costs. The distributor appealed and this decision was overturned, the Court of Appeal ruling that the distributor had sufficiently shown that the film's marketing and publicity did not convey antisemitic messages. However, the court concluded that there was sufficient evidence to allow the Appeal Court to rule that the film did indeed contain antisemitic material. The distributor then lodged a request for judicial review with the House of Lords, which rejected the appeal. In 2017, the distributor released a version with no cuts. It was rated 15 for strong language and scenes of violence, and was given an R rating for language. Plot 14-year-old Paul is a Jewish boy from London who wears a Jewish Star of David pin, which has been given to him by his father. When Paul is sent to a Polish concentration camp after his parents are taken away by the Nazis, he manages to escape and hides in a Polish forest. There he is discovered by a Polish girl named Jolanta, who is a part of a band of refugees hiding in the forest. Jolanta takes him to her cabin in the woods. Paul starts to grow tired and hungry after staying in the cabin for two days, but Jolanta tells him to wait a few more days, and then she will go back to Poland and will take care of him. Paul learns that the camp is run by the SS (Himmler's Army). He is hungry and asks Jolanta for some food. She takes him to a small hut where 82157476af
